FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

Which class should I register my child in?

If your child has never had swimming lessons before and is pre-school age, a Parent & Me class should be considered. School-age students with no experience should consider a Level 1 class. For students with some experience who are comfortable in the water, a Level 2 or 3 class may be more appropriate.

I am signing up for several sessions this summer. How do I schedule my child? Can I put him/her in different levels?

Generally, it is not recommended that you sign up for each level, as passing a level is not automatic, but based on completion of skills. If your child has little water experience, it is recommended you sign him/her up for the same level over multiple sessions. For students who are comfortable in the water, we recommend the level completed last year as a “refresher” and then moving on to the next level for additional sessions. If your child does pass a level earlier than expected, arrangements can be made with the Pool Manager to transfer classes, if class space is available. Lower level classes fill up very quickly; therefore it is much easier to move a child up than to transfer a child to a lower level.

My child is fearful of the water. What should I do?

There are many different reasons why children might be fearful of the water. The best thing to do is enroll in classes with low student-teacher ratios, for example: Level 1. Children should be encouraged to learn at their own pace.

My child does better if he/she can swim with the same instructor during the summer. What can I do?

Usually, staff is assigned classes depending on schedules and instructor availability. The Pool Manager will accept requests for instructors and will attempt to assign instructors as needed. However, there are no guarantees on specific instructors.

How long will it take my child to learn to swim?

Every child will be given individual instruction at their own pace. Children vary greatly in their learning capabilities and motor skills. However, repetition, patience, and persistence have been key factors in helping to develop water skills and encouraging comfort in the water.
